Watchman, What of the Night! We are opposed to holding out any false hopes to our friends. We have carefully watched the movement of parties that we might be enabled to guess at the result of the coming election. The Republican party appears to be disheartened; there is no fire or life in it. The nominee At present we feel like saying nothing is known to be a man wholly inexperianced in statesmanship, and very many of his party friends doubt his qualifications for the office. Those who expected to humbug him through on a rail find the people will be controlled by no such folly.
